

Journal Inquirer.com

NORTH-CENTRAL CONNECTICUT'S HOMETOWN NEWSPAPER

Connecticut & Region

---

MCC to offer online degree program

Print Page

By Zachariah Hand
For the Journal Inquirer

Published: Saturday, August 4, 2012 12:05 AM EDT

Manchester Community College will be offering students the opportunity to earn a General Studies associate degree online starting this fall.

The General Studies associate degree is one of the most diverse areas of study at MCC, incorporating the broadest range of electives of any major.

The online program is designed for potential students who do not have the time to attend traditional classes on a regular basis due to family or work commitments. It offers flexibility so students can maintain their busy schedules while still pursuing higher education.

To register for the online program, students must take an assessment test that is designed to identify their level of readiness for online learning. Upon completion of the assessment, the student will be notified of the steps needed to complete the online program.

Many support services will be offered both online as well as on the college campus. These services include academic advisement as well as tutoring, so students can have the best opportunity to succeed.

More information about the online General Studies program can be found at Manchester Community College's website,

www.mcc.commnet.edu

Copyright © 2012 - Journal Inquirer

[x] Close Window